Unseen messages facebook iphone

The most common comment that comes after someone mentions Facebook Messenger is: I hate it, or Why do I need a separate app just for messages? While these may be valid statements, none of them mention the fact that there are messages in your inbox that you may have never seen. Check out the steps below to make sure you find hidden messages that might be waiting for you in the Facebook Messenger app. How to find hidden messages in Facebook Messenger Facebook Messenger is still one of the most popular messaging apps in the world, regardless of the haters. Most of us know that we receive some kind of notification (depending on your settings) when a new message is received. However, there are certain circumstances in which a new message will not prompt notification. Some messages sent from people outside your friends may remain hidden in the Facebook Messenger app. Step 1 Open the Facebook Messenger app on your phone and find the Settings icon in the lower-right corner. If you don't see Settings, click Me instead. Step 2 Tap the People section. You'll see message requests. Tap that section. Step 3. This section shows unread message requests. Among those requested is a blue link labeled See filtered requests. When you tap this, you'll be taken to the filtered request screen. If you have a filtered request they will all be listed here. Step 4. To delete these filtered messages, do so by tapping Edit, and then pressing Delete in the lower-right corner. Now, most of the posts hidden here can be junk or messages from people you've never heard of. But there is a chance that a post or two may actually prove to be relevant and important to you. So check these hidden messages from time to time to make sure you don't miss anything too important. How many hidden messages have you found in your Facebook Messenger app? You have a load of unread Facebook posts that you don't even know. They're tucked away in a hidden inbox that's a little tricky to find, so we've put together a guide to help you. You open the message requests folder in Messenger by tapping the People tab (circled above) Once on the People tab on Facebook, tap the text calling icon to access the hidden messages The messages are from people you're not friends with on Facebook and are registered as message requests. For some reason, Mark Zuckerberg's social media behemoth won't send you a notification when you'll get one - and they won't appear in your standard inbox. Instead, they appear in a special message request folder. To find it, first open the Messenger app on your smartphone. It's always worth getting your message requests folder for hidden chatsCredit: Getty - Contributor From here, select 'people' at the bottom of the screen. To the top of this section you will see a symbol that is a small text bubble with three dots in it. That's the message request folder - tap it to display your unread messages. If you don't know the person who's had contact, Facebook will show you a little information about them to let you know. They don't know if you've seen the post until you reply, so you don't have to worry about looking rude if you choose not to respond. However, be careful - as soon as you ping them a message, your accounts are connected so you send each other a message as if you were Facebook friends. Whether it's photos, status updates or check-ins, the social network has made its name in the digital world unlike any other. But, where there are a few perks, there should be a compromise or two. Facebook has improved in recent years in a way we could never have imagined. Messaging is one of those areas, and over time, the feature went from a regular IM service to a full-blown messaging grid for the masses. But as we said before, where there are perks, there are compromises. And in this case, we refer to that dreaded Seen receipt that is sent to the sender when you open a message in Facebook's own Messenger app. Jailbreaking, on the other hand, has given us the ability to disable this feature using tweaks like Facebook++, but for some users, the whole process of jailbreaking itself is a bit annoying and keeping things as simple as possible is top priority. This is where an app called Onread comes in. The best thing about this app is; it's available on the App Store for all iPhone users, and you don't have to jailbreak to use it. But what does the app do? In short, it's an alternative to Facebook's Messenger app, but doesn't send away the Seen receipt when you read a message. But there is one thing about the app that users will find rather absurd; It won't let you send messages. You only go through your conversations in stealth mode. This thing alone can break a deal for some, but hey, as long as the other person doesn't know you've read the post, you're gold. The is available for free in the App Store for iPhone users and requires iOS 7, iOS 8 or later to be installed on the device to make it work. Take it for a spin and let us know in the comments below what you like About.
